

Dear Mr. Jens-Kaufman:

First, let me thank you again for having recommended wonderful a researcher to me. Mr. Rückling and I have completed the research that I contemplated and I wanted to write to you to thank you for your recommendation of him to me and to let you know more of my high regard for him.

*Sir, I have used researchers in Germany, United States, Ireland, and a number from the Czech Republic. I want you to know that Mr. Rückling stands at the top of that list in my regard. I believe his expertise, professionalism and integrity is without parallel. He communicates frequently, on a timely basis and does very well in English. Even though we have never had the good fortune of meeting, his communication have nevertheless fostered an excellent and trustworthy relation between us. I could never imagine being happier with a recommendation then I am of your recommendation of him to me. I wish to note also that in conducting himself as above Mr. Rückling was also ever solicitous of cost effective solutions for me. While our research has not provided the success for which either of us had hoped, I am confident that the result was the best that was achievable. Certainly any lack was solely because of the lack of available records. Even then, we jointly collaborated on branches of research available to us and we exhausted those available branches. I believe Mr. Rückling was more disappointed then I when a branch of additional research proved barren. However, both positive and negative results of available branches of research are important and establish a very important research record. We were able to correct information that had been handed down through generations of relatives and in so doing have provided very important genealogical knowledge to the benefit of future family generations. The corrected information included not only the location of true family origin but also a full appreciation as to the identification of the correct ancestral family name and legitimate variations versus non-legitimate variations. I only hope sir that I have been able to at least partially describe my high regard for Mr. Rückling but alas I must admit to being inadequate in the regard. Perhaps I can best sum this up by saying that if I ever have need to research in Mr. Rückling's areas that I would most happy to use him again and again. Further sir may I offer to supplement your future recommendations of him to whatever extent that I am able. I am taking the liberty of copying this e-mail to Mr. Rückling The foregoing being said, I would only like to add that I hope to have the good future opportunity to recommend you and your office for anyone seeking recommendations for researchers in Germany. God bless you and all of yours,
Franklin J. "Joe" Visek, Grayson, Georgia, U.S.A.*
